To Whom It May Concern

Joseph Arzate has contracted for me as a FileMaker professional developer from Aug 2015 to current. Like all developers, Joseph came in, absorbed all current coded projects to understand our needs from prior developers. His responsibilities included requirements gathering, analysis and design of complex Web applications using a variety of technologies to include 3rd party hardware and plugins.

During the course of his employment, Joseph proved himself to be a dependable contractor and a hard worker with solid problem solving and technical skills. I was always impressed by Joe's ability to complete the work assigned. Joe not only met deadlines but also explains his programs in a way that non-experts can easily understand. This skill came in handy when he presented his programs to clients who weren't particularly tech savvy.

For contractual reason, I'm not able to disclose the actual customer Joseph supported. But I can relate that this was an ITAR client of our business that has all the requirement of government requisites.

Prior to Joseph coming onboard, our prior developer had created code to support various customer needs. However, the needs of certain customers required a more efficient and interface capabilities. Joseph was able to take us to the next level and satisfy those customer escalated specs while still maintaining government specs.

Joseph possessed the technical background to develop a cross operating system platform solution for our Windows, UNIX and MAC OS X environment. Through the use of specialized 3rd party plugins, FileMaker, and advance software development and engineering he was able to develop a unified seamless software solution across our mixed operating system environment.

Joseph takes his work very seriously and will enrolled in classes or take required measures to maintain customer specs and required compliancy. He is very IT security minded and that is key to our data industry.

Joseph would be an asset to have on any team. To say he's a team leader would be an understatement. During his tenure at our company, he's gone out of his way to welcome newcomers and resolve any problems they might have. He pitches innovative ideas at company meetings but also listens to what others have to say, including constructive criticism. When budgetary constraints limited the work our company could complete, Joe put his highly creative mind to use to come up with alternatives.

Overall, Joseph is a talented, hard-working contractor, and I am sad to see him leave. But your company offers him an opportunity for career growth that we simply can't provide him here. I strongly recommend Joseph as we know he will be a great resource to any organization needing his skills and character. Joseph is a valuable asset.

Sincerely,

Tony Ramiro
